LITTLE ANNIE ALBERT DEAD.

Little Annie Albert, the smallest baby in New York, died last night in Gouverneur Hospital. Annie came into this troubled world on Oct. 30, and weighed but ten ounces.

She was quite healthy and fully developed, however, and the physicians were confident of their ability to assist her to reach womanhood. The child improved, and a week ago weighed forty-eight ounces. The grip, however, not even respecting the smallest baby in New York, claimed Annie two days ago, and she was unequal to the struggle, and last night she died.

Annie's mother left the hospital ten days after the child was born, and never returned. The body was sent to the Morgue.

CHANGE IN NEW TRUST COMPANY

The Produce Exchange Trust Company will have a new head after Jan. 17. Dr. James H. Parker, who has been its President since the organization of the company, is to retire, and his place will in all probability be filled by the election of Turner A. Beall, one of the Vice Presidents of the company.

The Produce Exchange Trust Company commenced business on March 7, 1898. It has a capital of $500,000, and surplus of $500,000. It has made about $115,000, and now has deposits of nearly $7,000,000. Dr. Parker owns $82,000 of the stock. One of the big deals of the company was the getting of the $1,300,000 worth of city bonds, which Vermilye & Co. made a strong effort to secure last year.

It has been rumored that Dr. Parker was getting out because of friction between himself and the Trustees, they not agreeing with his policy, which was said to be too conservative. Dr. Parker declined to discuss the matter last night. He said, however, that he had recently bought a seat in the Stock Exchange, and as head of the stock brokerage and commission firm of Parker, Springs & Co., would take an active part in the stock market.

A Trustee strenuously denied that there had been any more friction or difference of opinion in the board than was incident to the conduct of the affairs of any corporation. A new set of Trustees, eight in number, will be elected this afternoon by the company.
