

funeral will be held at 10:30 A. M. to-day at the Masonic Temple.

David Randolph Morse.

David Randolph Morse, who had been engaged in the manufacture of wire goods and ventilating appliances at 45 Fulton Street, died yesterday at his home, 112 Fort Greene Place, Brooklyn. He was born in New Market, N. J., March 30, 1835, and educated in Bloomfield, N. J., and New Hampton N. H. He was a member of the firm of Howard & Morse, Treasurer and a Director of the Associated Manufacturers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company, Second Vice President and Trustee of the City Savings Bank of Brooklyn, and a Director of the Manufacturers' Association of New York. He was also a Trustee of the Washington Avenue Baptist Church of Brooklyn, a member of the Hardware and Oxford Clubs of Brooklyn, Vice President of the Morse Society, and Treasurer and a Director of the Manufacturers' Association of Brooklyn.

Charles M. Elkins.

WAKEFIELD, Mass., June 28.—The inventor of the air door check, Charles M. Elkins, died at his home, here, to-day, aged seventy years. He was a member of the well-known Boston hardware firm of A. J. Wilkinson & Co.

English Tourist Died of Pneumonia.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 28.—A. Boyd Watson, a young Englishman, said to be a member of a wealthy family, is dead at a hospital here. He had pneumonia. He was making a trip around the world, and he intended to return to England by way of South Africa. A brother in London has been cabled.

Death of Chicago Grain Operator.

CHICAGO, June 28.—Owen H. Roche, formerly a well-known Board of Trade operator, died here to-day of apoplexy, aged sixty years. He came here from Boston in 1872, accumulated a fortune in the grain business, and retired from active operation two years ago.

Policeman Thrown from Horse Dies.

James McAdams, for many years a detective on the staff of Inspector Byrnes, and who was retired from the police force while a member of the Tombs Court Squad six years ago, died at his home, 132 East Eighty-fifth Street, yesterday morning, from injuries sustained on Decoration Day when his horse ran away while he was driving in Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, and threw him on his head. Mr. McAdams was a policeman for six months less than thirty years, and was the father of Sergt. James C. McAdams of the Eldridge Street Station. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, Park Avenue and Eighty-fourth Street.

Obituary Notes.

R. A. LANCASTER, banker and broker of Richmond, Va., died at his home in Bath County, Va., yesterday. He was seventy-three years of age. Death was caused by heart failure.

HOMER F. BASSELL, for thirty years librarian of the Bassell Library, died in his home in Waterbury, Conn., aged eighty-one years. He was the author of several important works on entomology.

WILLIAM H. TERRY, a wealthy retired building contractor, died at his home in Dunnellen, N. J., yesterday. He was sixty-one years of age, and formerly resided in Brooklyn. He leaves a wife, two sons, and a daughter.

GARRETT FURMAN, who died at the Kings County Hospital yesterday, was a resident of Jamaica. He was removed from his home to the hospital some time ago. Mr. Furman was well known in Queens County political circles fifteen years ago. In 1883 and 1884 he was Sheriff of Queens County. A daughter and two sons survive him.

THOMAS D. SHERLOCK, a State Deputy Factory Inspector, died yesterday after a long illness at his home, 107 South Fourth Street, Williamsburg. He was forty-three years old, and was born in the Fourteenth Ward section of Williamsburg, and for more than twenty years was active in Democratic politics. He is survived by a widow, two daughters, and four sons.

JOHN D. O'SULLIVAN, who died Thursday in his sixty-first year at his home, 1,208 Bushwick Avenue, Brooklyn, was for many years an inspector of streets in the Department of Highways. He was a veteran of the civil war and belonged to Mansfield Post, No. 35. The funeral will take place this afternoon, the interment being in Calvary Cemetery.

WILLIAM B. S. REED died on Friday night at his home, 76 McDonough Street, Brooklyn. He was forty-five years old, and was a well-known civil and mining engineer, having been identified with the development of coal and iron mines, and the construction of bridges and railroads in the West and South. He was a graduate of the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute. Mr. Reed is survived by two sisters.

Dr. BENJAMIN ANDREWS died at his home, 227 Berkeley Place, Brooklyn, on Thursday. His funeral will take place this afternoon. Dr. Andrews was born in this city in 1820, and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1847. After practicing his profession for some years he retired, and devoted his attention to his large property interests. Dr. Andrews is survived by his son, William A. Andrews.

GEORGE HAMILTON DALLON, who died on Friday at his home, 128 Halsey Street, Brooklyn, was the head of the woolen commission house of G. H. Dallon & Co. of Manhattan. Mr. Dallon, who was forty-three years old, was a Director of the Amaranth Association and a member of the Columbian Club and the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Robert A. Lancaster.

Robert A. Lancaster, aged seventy-one years, died suddenly yesterday morning at his country place in Hillsborough, Va. He was the head of the banking house of R. A. Lancaster & Sons of 10 Wall Street, having himself been actively engaged in banking in this city since 1865. Mr. Lancaster was among the first Southerners to establish themselves in business in New York after the civil war. He continued, however, to maintain his connection with the South and was a partner in the banking house of Lancaster & Lucke of Richmond, and a close friend and business associate of John L. Williams, father of John Skelton Williams. Mr. Lancaster was twice married, his second wife being Miss Carrington of the Virginia family of that name, who survives him with several children, including Edwin W. and Nathaniel D. Lancaster, who were partners in the firm of R. A. Lancaster & Sons.

Charles Sotheran.

Charles Sotheran, a journalist and author of several books on Socialism and other topics, died at his home, at 26 West Ninety-ninth Street, Friday of heart disease. He was born in England July 8, 1847, and came to this country in 1874, beginning work on the staff of The New York World and afterward serving as a literary writer on various other publications, being at one time associate editor and proprietor of The New York Echo.

Some of his books were "Percy Bysshe Shelley as Philosopher and Reformer," "Cagliostro: Impostor or Martyr?" and "Horace Greeley and Other Pioneers of American Socialism." He was a thirty-third degree Mason, and Assistant Grand Secretary General of the Supreme Council, a member of the Theosophical Society, the New York Press Club, and the Thirteen Club. He was married Oct. 17, 1893, to Mrs. Alice Hyneman Rhine, an authoress and magazine writer, who survives him. The